BEAUTY SEEN IS NEVER LOST—

BEAUTY seen is never lost.
God's colors are as fast:
The glory of that sunset in heaven
Into my soul has passed.
Wherefore—

Let there be many windows in your soul.
That all the glory of the universe
May beautify it—Tune your ear
To all the wordless music of the stars.
And to the voice of nature, and your heart.
Shall be enlarged and gladdened,
unseen hands Shall speed to help you from their peace-crowned heights,
And all the forces of the firmament
Shall stoop to make you strong.

Dieting, Like Misery, Loves Company

Misery isn't the only thing that loves company.
If you are starting to diet, or cut your hair, or put yourself through a course of sprouts in exercising, why not sign up your girl friend or your sister to do the same.

You'll find that having someone else committed to the same amount of exertion, or the same self-denial of food, or the same number of brush strokes on your hair by night, gives you just the moral stamina you may need to carry on.

For the biggest single stumbling block to beauty is lack of continuity in treatments. Haven't you yourself bought an expensive jar of cream or a manicure set or a hair tonic, resolving to spend a half hour every night towards beautifying and then weaken about the third night? Everybody has!

Don't be discouraged but do see if you cannot fortify yourself by getting a partner in beauty treatments. You'll find that you have to admit that you're just a weak woman who can't stick to a schedule. You'll go a lot farther toward carrying out your original plan.

Sometimes a little competition with a friend spurs you on. Suppose you both tackle a diet at the same time. Put up a supper on the loser's larger number of pounds within a month. Let the winner eat a dinner cooked by the loser, or go to a matinee on tickets purchased by the loser.

Why not talk over a plan with your girl friend for devoting a half hour every night to beauty.
Lay out a schedule of so many brushes to the hair, so many brushes to the face, so many long strokes massaging the face, so many minutes to your nails.
You'll find yourself much more punctilious. You will enjoy the results more, too, when you can admire each other.

BABIES BORN IN WINTER NEED INDOOR SUN BATHS—

Babies born in the fall or winter should be given long indoor sun baths throughout the winter, the J. S. Children's Bureau says. In the temperate zones, especially in all and winter, the sunlight must be supplemented with cod-liver oil, which is known as "bottled sunshine."

101st Birthday Observed Today

Salt Lake City, Nov. 28.—(AP)— Mrs. Almida Day McClellan, former colonist of the Latter Day Saints church, and many of her 432 living descendants, observed her 101st birthday anniversary here today.

Born a year after the founding of the church by Joseph Smith, she became a member at the age of 4 and participated in colorful chapters of its history on frontiers of the west.
She was 13 years old when, enroute west from New York state,
she learned of the slaying of Smith, reveler by her people as a prophet and seer, in a Carthage, Ill., jail.
She continued to Nauvoo, Ill., then the Mormon capital. Leaders of the church were driven from Illinois. Mrs. McClellan was married and the mother of one child before she and her family joined the exodus across the plains to Salt Lake City.

Later, as a Mormon colonist, Mrs. McClellan was designated by the leaders of the church to go with her family to Arizona where settlements were being established.
Then, still in search of frontiers, she moved into Mexico, where the church had extended its colonizing and missionary activities. She remained there until 1912, when the Mexican religious laws compelled the departure of non-citizen teachers.

Mrs. McClellan is the mother of 12 children, nine of whom survive.
She also has 81 grandchildren, 273 great grandchildren, and 69 great great grandchildren.

Mrs. Hoover Invites Women of the Nation to Assist

Washington, Nov. 28.—(AP)—
Mrs. Herbert Hoover has invited every American woman to join in providing food, shelter and clothing for the needy.

Addressing them from the White House yesterday, Mrs. Hoover asked "each and every one of us to consider ourselves volunteer associate members" of the National Women's Committee of Welfare and Relief Mobilization of 1932.

Saying there is an "ample supply" of food and clothing, that all must give generously and that distributing facilities are adequate to reach everyone, the president's wife stated:

"To this purpose the mobilization of all the welfare and relief organizations in our country was established in the early autumn in order that they might all work together to the best advantage."

Mrs. Hoover suggested volunteer workers could serve by finding those in need but are ashamed to ask for help, by working to keep hospitals and visiting nurse associations well maintained and to help provide recreation and educational facilities for unemployed young people and others.

The address was made over a nation-wide network of the National Broadcasting Company.

Miss Van Cleve On Child Hygiene To Woman's Club

The Dixon Woman's Club met in regular session last Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Herman Walters, chairman of the Child Hygiene Department of the club, presented Miss Jessie Van Cleve, lecturer from the American Library Association. Miss VanCleve spoke in a very authoritative manner on the subject of "Children's Literature." She said that "Through books a child should be able to interpret life, that books should stimulate a child's vital imagination and give him a foundation for his system of ethics." Miss Van Cleve had several of the choice books for children with her, using them to illustrate her talk.

Dainty refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mesdames Buch-ner, G. A. Rhoads, Brauer, Cost, Derr, Lewis, Sheffield, Onnen, Miss Beier.

Judge Edwards Speaks in Amboy

Circuit Judge Harry Edwards of Dixon spoke to the Amboy Woman's club on "Phases of Interest in Legislation" at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the club's regular meeting in the library.

Preceding the judge's talk at the meeting, Walter George and John Griffith presented a musical duet.
Tea was served by Mrs. L. L. Brink and Mrs. Emma Saguin, and Mrs.
Clarence Martz.

Youngsters Need Space and Privacy

A welfare worker told me recently that one of the worst phases in this depression is the doubling up of families, reduced space to play in, too many people thrown into close quarters, and the hopeless confusion of living.

"It is having a noticeable effect on the behavior of children," she said, "because good behavior has its foundation in decent living and enough room to keep up self respect."

When conditions improve, this congestion naturally will be relieved. Let us hope it will be soon.
But no matter how prosperous we may become again, there are numroomy quarters in the light of an asset in raising their young.

Four Vases In One
With home back on the social map and family entertaining the next form of amusement to be had, this brand new vase would please any inveterate hostess that you have on your Christmas list.

It is new in several ways. First,
it has four different vases incorporated into one, which offers the recipient varied ways of using a few blooms. Second, it is crystal white, the latest color for vases.
Last, but not least, it is ultra-modern.

You can get the same type of vase in a two-holder variety but this new four-in-one is the last word in table decoration.

LEARNING THE ART OF WRITING.

Probably there never was a time when so many people were trying to turn themselves into writers as the present. Every publishing house and every magazine office is deluged with manuscripts. Colleges and universities, to say nothing of correspondence schools and fly-by-night outfits set up by broken-down hacks, offer a wealth of courses designed to show that you too can become a poet, or a playwright, or a novelist, or what-not. The click-clack of the typewriter is heard everywhere, from kitchens to prisons and from deep-water ships to city flats.

But the net result of it all, unfortunately, is only a very slight addition to the world's supply of worth-while literature. Much is being written, these days, but little of it is of much value. The overwhelming majority of completed manuscripts, of course, never get printed at all; but even of those that do make the grade, only a few amount to a pint of beans.

Considering the incredible richness and color of American life as a source for the creative writer, and the extent to which the urge for creative work has spread among people everywhere, this is a trifle odd; and the reason, very possibly, is simply the fact that we have too many people trying to teach others how to write and not enough people trying to teach themselves.

H. L. Mencken remarked not long ago that the one good way to learn how to write is to soak yourself in the works of the great writers. The embryonic writer who immerses himself in Hardy, Conrad, Thackeray, Poe and the others will learn, unconsciously, how great tales are put together and how great English is written, far better than any classroom can teach him.

And Charles J. Finger points out that "Bunyan the tinker, and Burns the plowman, and Whitman the office man, and Keats the apothecary, and Dickens the factory boy had no schooling to train them. They were. They had something to express and they expressed themselves."

The nation today is striving to bring forth a rich and varied literature. It will succeed better, perhaps, when ambitious young writers realize that the literary art is a thing you can't get out of textbooks.

THAT DIVORCE SLUMP.

Records of the Chicago divorce courts show that fewer people get divorces in time of depression than in time of prosperity. During the first nine months of 1932, the divorces granted in Chicago reached a total 13 per cent below that recorded for the same period of 1931.

This seems to be one of those little by-products of the depression, that can give rise to a good deal of speculation. Why should divorces fall off in bad times? Is it because people are less willing to cut loose from an established home where there is, whatever the drawbacks, at least a certainty of food and shelter? Is it because the mere cost of a divorce is more than a lot of would-be divorcees can afford?

Or is it, perhaps, because some of the marital difficulties that seem to loom so large in ordinary times fade into insignificance when real troubles arise? It would be nice to think so.

SPEED LAME DUCKS' PASSING.

Franklin D. Roosevelt does not take office until next March. However, it is already apparent that he will have a tremendous influence on the government policies that take shape between now and then. He and President Hoover are trying to shape a mutually satisfactory stand in the war debts; the short-term Congress is looking to him constantly for guidance and advice.

All of this adds one last, clinching argument to the case for the new pending 20th amendment to the Constitution—the lame duck amendment which would abolish the short session and cause a new president and Congress to take office at the beginning of January instead of the beginning of March.

That amendment must be ratified by 19 more states. Let us hope that their action can be prompt.

Sidelights In News In Capital Of United States

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington—In the cold gray dawn, now a fortnight or so after the elections that brought such a smashing Democratic victory, what must be the feelings and reflections of the key men in the Republican party?

What must the President himself think? His only public comment was made in the brief speech at Glendale, Calif., en route to Washington, when he sounded the call for a "militant" organization—not reorganization—of the Republican ranks up and down the line.

The President's most intimate friends, who have seen him informally since his return to the White House, profess to have discovered in him a new Herbert Hoover—or at least a Hoover not known for many months. He is a cheerful man, they say, freer from care than he has been for many a day, yet seriously concerning himself with the continuing problems of the Presidency.

A TONIC—

The fact that his responsibilities are so soon to end has had a tonic effect on him, they add, and revived the Hoover sense of humor so well known in private to his intimates, yet so utterly unknown in the public view of the President. One one party stalwart, who told him consolingly to forget 1932 and look forward to triumphant vindication and election in 1936, he turned a comically scowling glance and said:

"And you call yourself my friend!"

What are the thoughts of Henry L. Stimson and what is he going to do with Woodley, that imposing estate of his in the heart of the Capital's most exclusive residential section? What does Ogden Mills think, and also what does he think of the possibilities of gathering the fragments between now and 1936 to assemble a Republican nomination boom for him at that time? With Mills and James Wadsworth now warring for the leadership of the party in New York, Republican politics in that state is booming at what some considered greater speed than even before the election.

WHAT ABOUT HURLEY?

And what does Pat Hurley, who made such a furious aerial campaign for the President, think? Hurley, young, ambitious and alert, will be at loose ends after March 4th with new connections to make either in public or commercial life. He has shown no indication of quitting Washington, where he has spent most of his adult life.

Washington—The Democratic sweep on November 3 was not confined to Senators and Congressmen "on the Hill".

For that crowd of people who must leave on March 4 includes many who have come to be regarded almost as fixtures around the Capital because of their long service. Veteran secretaries to members of Congress and clerks of committees, many of whom have spent a good part of their lives there, must depart.

There's Representative Wood's secretary for example—Miss Jessie T. Lovell. She came to "the Hill" 32 years ago, worked for 18 years with one Congressman and has been with Wood for 14. Wood's defeat in Indiana after a period of service extending over 18 years forces Miss Lovell to look for another job.

Jim Cook, a recognized authority on international relations, tariff and taxation, for 20 years has been secretary to the Representative of the second Rhode Island district. His boss' defeat in November places Cook among the unemployed.

WOMEN LOSE OUT—

Miss Lolla Williams, secretary to Charles Curtis and the first woman ever to hold such a post with a Vice-President, is another casualty. "But he'll still be the boss," she says of the Vice-President.

Another veteran congressional secretary and clerk is Miss Virginia Davis who has been on "the Hill" for 19 years with Rep. Albert Johnson of Washington. Miss Davis has been publicly commended for her work on the House immigration committee where she has served as clerk for the past three years.

Mrs. Edna Stenger has been with Burton French of Idaho for the last 16 years. French's congressional assignments extended in to many fields and Mrs. Stenger has become an expert in each. She is as familiar with Federal appropriations for the Navy and Indian reservation problem as she is with her district in Idaho.

And there are several other who face similar situations.

NEW JOBS FOR SOME—

A few of these veteran behind-the-scenes workers may be able to land jobs with the men who replace their old employers. This often happens. A new Senator or Congressman who arrives in Washington not knowing much about the way things are done sometimes

The big volcano still puffed smoke and Duncy said, "This is no joke. Supposin' lava starts to flow. What will we Tines do?" "I will admit the sight is great but is it safe to hesitate around the monstrous crater just to witness something new?" "Oh, so far we are safe and sound, so I am going to hold my ground," said Scoaty. "You're a fraidy cat. You always want to run."

"Let's just sit down and eye the treat. Then, if it turns out to be bad, we all can jump and scatter. In the meantime we'll have fun."

So down they sat, still very thrilled. 'Twas strange the way the smoke puffs filled the air and then were carried off by little puffs of breeze.

In moments when the breeze died down the smoke would settle toward the ground. At one time Windy said, "We'd better drop to our knees."

"The smoke will shortly rise again and keep from choking us." And then the Tines heard a rumbling sound and Duncy cried, "Oh, dear!"

"It sounds like trouble's going to come. Just listen to that crater hum. I'm still of the opinion that we'd best get out of here."

"In fact, though you may want to stay, I think I'll travel on my way. I'll see you later, far below, where I'll be safe and sound." He walked a little ways and then heard Scoaty shout to him again. "Hey! Look what's coming into view!" And Duncy turned around. You can imagine his surprise when, right before his very eyes, he saw some wee tots climbing from the crater and the smoke.

One shouted, "We are hotsy-tots! We'll have some run. Oh, lots and lots. Please do not run and leave us. We are friendly. It's no joke." (The Tines start out for Weeland in the next story.)

MALIGNANT DIPHTHERIA

Reports from Europe tell of the prevalence there of a malignant form of diphtheria, and it is not beyond the realm of possibility that this form of diphtheria may be brought to the United States.

It is more than a quarter of a century that diphtheria, which had previously been a disastrous and destructive disease, was subjected to effective control through diphtheria anti-toxin.

Recently, however, there appeared a type of diphtheria which seemed to be little affected by diphtheria anti-toxin.

In the Virchow-Krankenhaus in Berlin in 1924 but 5 per cent of the cases brought there suffering with diphtheria succumbed to the disease. By June, 1927, however, the percentage of deaths increased to 26.7 per hundred cases.

The type of the disease also appeared different, for instead of the membranes characteristic of diphtheria being found in the neighborhood of the tonsils and soft pal-

SO. CALIFORNIA HOLDS ANSWER TO GRID PUZZLE

Victory Over Ramblers Will Make Trojans National Champs

By HERBERT W. BARKER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)
New York, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Southern California's men of Troy today held the key to the annual puzzle: which is the country's greatest football team?

Notre Dame's whirlwind performance against the Army last Saturday serves to increase immeasurably the importance of the clash of Ramblers and Trojans at Los Angeles December 10. Should Southern California win that struggle and then emerge the victor in the annual Rose Bowl game at Pasadena January 2, there would be small need to look further for a generally acceptable national champion.

The Rose Bowl invitation is considered almost certain to go either to Colgate's unscored-on Red Raiders or to Pitt's Panthers, generally rated the two best football machines in the east.

This schedule would leave out of consideration such high-powered outfits as Michigan and Auburn but the chances are there would be a vast majority ready to accept the December 10 and January 2 tests as conclusive.

Major Games Ahead
But before then, a half dozen major contests will have to be disposed of including the Army-Navy, South Carolina-Auburn, and Alabama-St. Mary's games this Saturday, the Oregon-Louisiana State, and Florida-University of California at Los Angeles duels December 17, and the clash of Georgia Tech and California at Berkeley December 24.

With virtually every title but the mythical national crown decided, here are the final championship ratings, together with prospects for this week's games:

East
Colgate, undefeated, untied and unscored on in the best record but played a less taxing schedule than Pitt, also unbeaten but tied by Ohio State and Nebraska. The big game of the week, Army vs Navy at Philadelphia, now looks like a much closer battle than previously had been anticipated. Navy held Notre Dame to a 12-0 score while Army fell before the Ramblers, 20-0.

Other games this week include Carnegie Tech and Georgetown; Maryland and Western Maryland; and Rutgers and Manhattan, the latter a charity affair.

South
Auburn, crippled by illness, must hurdle South Carolina to gain clear claim to the conference title. Louisiana State has completed its conference slate undefeated and Tennessee, unbeaten but tied by Vanderbilt, is favored to walk off Florida this week.

Pacific Coast
Southern California already has clinched the conference title and remains now until the Notre Dame game Dec. 10, Washington and the University of California at Los Angeles tangle in the final conference game this week. St. Mary's of Oakland plays Alabama of the Southern Conference.

Big Ten and Midwest
Big Ten conference season closed Nov. 19 with Michigan the champion and Purdue the runner-up. Detroit, strong independent team travels south this week to play Loyola of New Orleans. Tulsa meets Mississippi.

Big Six
Nebraska, the champion again, meets Southern Methodist at Dallas. Missouri plays St. Louis.

Southwest
Texas Christian clinched title Saturday by defeating Southern Methodist, 3-0. Texas placed second and Rice third.

Missouri Valley
Oklahoma A. & M., loop titleholder, plays Texas Mines at El Paso today.

Rocky Mountain
Utah the championship for the fifth successive year.

TO SEND INVITATION

Los Angeles, Nov. 28.—(AP)—With little doubt the University of Southern California will be named tomorrow night by the Tournament of Roses Association to represent the west in the Rose Bowl football classic January 2, speculation as to who will be the Trojans' opponent and narrowed today to three or four teams.

Army, which had been considered a likely candidate provided permission could be obtained for the trip, was eliminated as a result of its overwhelming defeat by Notre Dame Saturday. This leaves Arizona, Colgate, Michigan and possible Pittsboro.

The western team after it is formally notified of its selection by the association, will invite the eastern team.

Michigan is reported to be the first choice of the Trojans, champions of the Pacific Coast Conference. The only obstacle in the way for the champions of the "Big Ten" conference appearing in Pasadena is a conference rule against west season games. However, the rule might be changed.

Colgate is in line for the invitation, having shown high class football in defeating Brown Thanks giving Day to keep its record clear and its goal line unscathed.

Auburn, or Alabama Poly also is receiving consideration. The Southern Conference has sent five teams to Rose Bowl contests, losing one of these games, winning three and tying one.

Pittsburgh, undefeated but twice tied, is still apparently in the running but it is believed the Trojans will make their final choice from one of the three major undefeated and untied teams.

Fistic Program Of Week Interesting

New York, Nov. 28.—(AP)—National boxing interest centers on San Francisco this week as Jackie Fields, welterweight champion of the world, makes his first ring appearance in months.

His fistic future threatened for a time by an eye ailment that since has responded to treatment, Fields will tune up his repertoire of punches for more important tests soon to come, in a 10 round over-weight match against Tommy Herman of Chicago at San Francisco Thursday night.

The far west also offers Ace Hudkins in a come-back test. The one-time Nebraska Wildcat meets Wesley Ketchell, Portland, Ore., light heavyweight, in a ten rounder at Los Angeles Tuesday night.

Tommy Paul of Buffalo, recognized as featherweight champion by the National Boxing Association, faces Young Gens of LaSalle, Ill., in a ten round non-title bout at Chicago the same night.

Boxing Show To Entertain Fans

Boxing fans' attention will be centered on the Dixon Athletic Club six-bout card to open at 8:30 o'clock tonight in the Ottawa Avenue arena. This third of the winter series of shows promises to be a worthwhile attraction.

Elwood Kid McReynolds of Dixon makes his second indoor start before a local gathering meeting Herman Molt, tough boy of Chillicothe. In the semi-windup, George Carlson of Dixon runs into his old rival from downstate, Delbert Linton. Clark Rauch meets Jimmy Scott. Fred Koller fights Calvin Ramsey; Bill Peterson tangles with Kenny Chance and in the opener Glen Rutherford is matched with Earl Kellen of Ambosy.

Judging the evening's entertainment will be Cal Tyler of Dixon and Harry Kidd of Sterling. Tim Sullivan of Dixon will preside at the bell.

BABE GOES A-HUNTING

The same remarkable sense of timing that made him the home run king of his baseball days gives Babe Ruth prestige in any hunting party. Shooting from the left shoulder, Babe is one of the most formidable marksmen you would care to watch.

Connecticut operatives relate interesting incidents of a recent expedition in which Babe turned out to be the hero. Babe was guest of Thomas L. Beck of Wilton, Conn., chairman of the state game and fisheries commission.

The Babe began with this apology: "This is my first time hunting this season, and maybe I won't be so hot."

There were four or five others in the party. Just after the start had been made, at Ridgebury, which is just west of Waterbury, a rabbit came tearing along.

BABE WAITS AND HITS—

All hands let go, but the Babe waited. All missed, except your friend, Mr. Ruth, who brought down the bunny with a perfect shot.

A short time later, another bunny came bounding along. Again all hands pumped away at the little spreader. But Babe waited. After they all had missed, again he stopped the rabbit with a perfect shot.

The big fellow trudged along through the swampy going, toting his lead of game which grew heavier and heavier as the expedition continued. The Babe was paying the price of his skill, and once in slippery underfooting went into water up to his knees.

TOO MUCH FREIGHT—
"I'm not going to shoot any more until we get back near the house," he finally announced. "Packing these rabbits isn't so much fun as it looks."

One more shot would bring his legal limit of three, but he refused to let go until almost in sight of the farmhouse. Another rabbit came sprinting past. The rest of the party let go with a terrific detonation, but for the third time the Babe waited until all had taken their shots. And when he fired, down came the rabbit.

KNOCKS OFF PHEASANTS—
The Babe was tickled with his marksmanship, but claimed a big kick out of the long-range shooting at pheasants, which fly high and wild in Connecticut.

One of the dogs routed a pheasant within Ruth's range. He pulled up rather quickly and missed. Then, though the bird was soaring high, he took aim once more. Down came the bird.

When the distance was paced, it was estimated that Babe had scored his hit at about 70 yards. That's shooting!

Later, at close range, he brought down his second pheasant, shooting the only woodcock seen all day.

That night the Babe's rabbits and pheasants and the game bagged by the other members of the party were served at dinner at Tom Canty's in Norwalk. There also were venison, duck and coon.

The generalship and timing Babe displayed during the hunt were no better than his abilities with knife and fork. The Bambino not only can shoot, but eat.

Surgeons Operate to Save Leg of Charley Gelbert

The St. Louis Cardinals are faced with losing their star shortstop, Charley Gelbert, as the result of a hunting accident. Gelbert is in a Philadelphia hospital undergoing an operation to save his leg. The leg was injured when Gelbert, hunting near Chambersburg, Pa., tripped on a vine and fell. The jar discharged his gun and the shot entered his leg. Nerves were shattered by the lead pellets. Mrs. Gelbert is shown at his bedside.

MASSACHUSETTS STATE BACK IS LEADING SCORER OF THE NATION

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Lou Bush, Massachusetts State halfback, is the undisputed king of the nation's football scorers. The little New Englander wound up his season a week ago with 114 points, far beyond the runner-up, Ralph Graham of Kansas State, who finished with 85. Third place went to Carroll Broderick of Western Kentucky Teachers, with 84. The leader in each of the nation's 10 major groups or conferences follows:

ONLY SIX MAJOR TEAMS REMAIN UNDEFEATED OR UNTIED ON GRID

New York, Nov. 28.—(AP)—The select list of college football teams neither beaten nor tied has been cut to six with all but a few final returns already in the records.

Colgate in the east, Auburn in the south, Jefferson University in the southwest, Michigan and Valparaiso in the midwest and Southern California in the far west are the sole remaining eleven with perfect records. Of these only Southern California and Auburn have not yet finished their regular schedules.

Eight other teams have escaped defeat but have been tied. Of these only Tennessee still has a regularly scheduled game to play.

Texas Christian leads the undefeated list in scoring with 283 points and Colgate and St. John's of Minnesota lead defensively with uncrossed goal lines.

Michigan, Pittsburgh or Southern California.

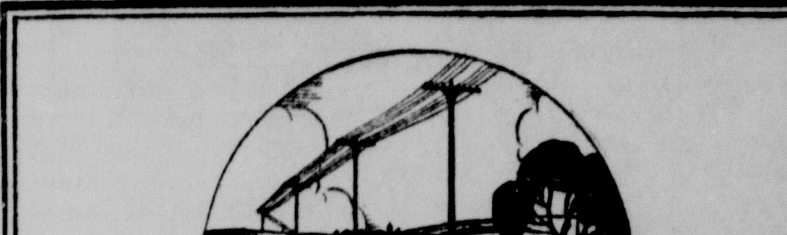

Prof. Frank G. Dickinson of the University of Illinois, originator of the system, today said the field of 110 teams used in calculating his ratings, had been reduced to the undefeated Wolverines, Panthers and Trojans, but that his figures were not complete enough to indi-

A Telephone Can Help You to Get More Out of Life

If your house has no telephone, you make it very difficult for people to be friendly to you. And you handicap yourself in being a good friend to others. Time is valuable, of course, but a friendly visit by telephone only takes minutes—and it can mean so much. Especially in troubled times.

Of course a telephone has hundreds of purposes, in helping to protect your family, in helping you to make money, etc. All of them are useful and valuable. But best of all, we like to think of a telephone as something that keeps people happy—keeps them together and makes them friends.

Don't handicap yourself—and others. Order a telephone installed—today.

Traveling Around America

A BIT OF VENICE IN AMERICA

NOT far from Mexico City is an enchanting, bit of Venice—the "floating gardens" of Xochimilco, once the favorite playgrounds of the Aztec Emperors. It is fascinatingly foreign sights such as these—found almost at our very doors—which make Central American towns such a popular port of call on the cruises between New York and California. These gorgeous gardens date back to pre-Aztec times in their early days they really floated—the flowers were planted in earth spread over rafts woven from twigs and vines, so that the flower beds could be moved about as the color scheme, or the mood of the gardeners demanded. The gardens no longer float, yet narrow canals paved with water lilies still wind their way among the fragrant roses, calla lilies, pinks and poppies. And boats filled with young love and melody still drift over the sparkling waters much as they did four centuries ago when Spaniards wooed the Aztec maid.

Week-end MURDER

GABRIELLE E. FORBUSH

BEGIN HERE TODAY

AMOS PARSONS, elderly cousin of LINDA AVERILL, falls to his death from the second floor balcony of the Averill's Long Island home. Linda reaches him just before he dies, in time to hear him gasp, "He pushed me!"

Linda, realizing her cousin had tried to tell her something, rushes upstairs to the balcony. Someone stood behind her, tries to strangle her and she falls in a faint. Her husband, TOM, sees her fall and rushes to her. There are four guests in the house and they all appear. The guests are MR. STATLANDER, business associate of Tom's; CAPTAIN DE VOS, a Dutchman; BELLEVILLE, MARVIN PRATT, former auditor of Linda's; and LIAN SHAUGHNESSY, Irish writer. Each of them has quarreled with Cousin Amos.

DR. PARSONS takes charge. It is assumed Cousin Amos' death was accidental and that Linda fainted from shock. When she is finally able to tell Tom what happened she persuades him that they must keep the four guests with them until they discover who is the murderer. They are unexpectedly aided in this plan when DR. ROYLE, official medical examiner, sends word that everyone in the house must remain until he has questioned them. Royle is on a fishing trip and can not return for several hours.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XVII

In the silence after the little car shot out of the stone garage Linda heard Tom emerging from one upstairs room and caught the words, "Very good of you—" As he stopped at another door she suddenly remembered that only three of their guests were here in the house. Tom still had one of them to notify as well as the one whom she had quarreled in the garage.

"I'll run over myself and tell Mr. Shaughnessy," she thought impulsively and had pushed the screen door open before something checked her like the touch of a cold hand.

She stood on the threshold of their house and looked across the road and the lawn toward the garage. A silence so profound that it seemed to have weight and depth lay over the peaceful little scene, so clear was the day and so hot the air that clothed the world. Each pebble in the roadway stood out distinctly from its fellow, each blade of grass held itself erect and alone, unswayed by the slightest current of air.

The garage—that was where she had started to go. And in the garage was a man. Just an ordinary, pleasant, well-dressed, well-mannered man. Or rather perhaps not quite ordinary, for genius—if he was a genius—never is that. Certainly Lian Shaughnessy, in both appearance and behavior, was rather unusual, though on the side of distinction. What was there then about the thought of him that had stopped her as though by an invisible hand? She did not know, but she knew she was physically incapable of forcing herself to step into the roadway, walk across the lawn and go up that short flight of steps. In fact she could not even face the idea of it.

TOM, swinging downstairs with the satisfied air of one who has accomplished what he set out to do, found her sitting on the little hall bench and he did not guess the effort it took her to smile at him as he stopped before her.

"How did they take it?" she enquired.

"All right—I'll tell you later—upstairs." She nodded as his voice dropped warningly.

"I'll just run over to the garage now and tell Shaughnessy," he went on and the words, so exactly her own thought of the moment before, brought her instantly to her feet.

"I'll—I'll walk over with you." It was unbearable that Tom should go off so cheerfully, alone, into the little building that had once seemed so commonplace and now had grown so strangely alien.

Disregarding his surprise, she walked primly beside him. If she talked her teeth would chatter and that would hurt her pride! But she was entirely willing to remain downstairs while he ran up and knocked on the door and, standing on the first step of the little flight, she had no need to strain her ears to catch Tom's part, at least, of the conversation.

"Hello, Shaughnessy! Oh, sorry—didn't mean to wake you up!" (He could sleep, exhausted, whatever had happened this morning!) "I won't be a moment. Just wanted to ask you if you would mind staying on the rest of the day. There's been a little misunderstanding about the accident this morning. Our doctor's a bit apt to go his own way regardless of the regulations and he shouldn't have permitted the body to be moved so quickly. He okayed our taking it to Port and now that's got us all in Dutch. The county medical examiner is away but he's coming back, and just to show he's boss, he's ordered us all to stay until he can go over the ground and go through the proper formalities. He's due around dinner time so if you don't mind—"

Then a sleepy murmur and when Tom spoke again his voice sounded decidedly relieved.

"That's fine. Luncheon won't be for an hour or so. Will you feel like coming over or would you rather—" Again the murmur and again Tom sounded relieved. "Good! We'll look for you at 1 then."

LINDA was strolling toward the house when Tom caught up with her.

"So that's all right, Binks, my child," he said cheerfully. "The beggar was still half asleep when I left but he knows he's to stay and since he hadn't made a move toward going so far as I could see—"

"Well," Linda tried to be just. "He was up early this morning—as you remember!"

"Yes—I remember." Instinctively they lowered their voices.

"I told the others to come down whenever they were ready," said Tom. "That you would be down to luncheon but would rest until then in your room."

"Where you will join me—for our first conference," Linda answered grimly.

"That's the idea." "I'll go into the kitchen," she said. "I have to break the news to Rosie and Annie that the house party is still on their hands. I'll go up the back stairs and meet you in our room in five minutes."

"Yes," said Tom, stopping with his hand on the latch of the door. "But Binks—be careful!"

"What could possibly happen in five minutes?" She stopped. What had happened in five minutes, early that still, hot morning? Not trusting herself to speak, she nodded and hurried over the grass toward the service entrance.

She presumed she gave intelligent directions, for after their first expression of concern neither Rosie nor Annie seemed to regard her with any degree of alarm. But until she got upstairs again—safely and without meeting anyone—she moved with abstracted haste, her mind concentrated on that fierce desire to see Tom again, alone, to begin with him their secret, urgent, dangerous hunt for her cousin's murderer, still within her house.

At her husband's step in the hall Linda flung open the door eagerly and he was hardly inside and the door closed before she spoke.

"Tom—do any of them seem alarmed by this business about Dr. Boyle? Did you get anything from the way they took it?"

"No. Each one took it differently but all took it well. I blamed poor old Parsons pretty heavily and emphasized the fact that it was only a formality. At first Statlander was distinctly disagreeable but that could be laid to his dislike of having his plans upset twice in rapid succession. He was all ready to leave and his room was neat as a pin. If there was any evidence there against him it's gone now. I reminded him we still had a lot of Valeska business to discuss and that appeared to reconcile him. Either he really does want to finish what we're supposed to clean up this week-end or he decided he'd better seem to want to. Marvin—I'm afraid I was pretty short with Marvin. Just told him the facts and let it go at that."

"How did he act?" "Just the same. He'd be a good one to conceal a guilty secret because he always acts as if he had one, and so gradually you get used to it. When I knocked he opened the door and blocked it completely. I couldn't see into the room, and somehow I had the idea he didn't want me to. It might have been just my imagination. I—well, it wasn't any too easy for me to be civil and I can't honestly say I noticed much about him. He was stiff and had that air of holding something back, as I remember. In other words, quite himself. Then I went next door to DeVos. He was also quite himself, which meant that he was very pleasant and courteous, assured me he quite understood and that anything that made it easier for us was agreeable to him. He did ask about going off the grounds and I found he had a date with Fleur Stoner early this afternoon—"

"You might know she'd have her hooks in him!"

"And he'd thought he might simply check his bag at the station and go up to town later. He'd noticed the inn across the road there and had meant to stop there for lunch without bothering us."

"Thoughtful! And Mr. Shaughnessy we know about—so that's that! And now we must think of each one separately. Tom—what he's said and done, ever since he arrived. We'll start—"

"We'll start with Pratt," said Tom grimly. "After all, he was there and that seems fairly important."

"It is indeed," agreed Linda. "Don't think I entirely bar him out. But remember, too, his room is nearest Cousin Amos' and it's perfectly possible he heard him fall. And anyone who really had tried to strangle me wouldn't have waited while you swam in, ran across the lawn and came upstairs."

"He might stay from bravado, just because no one would think he would. Anyhow, we have that on him definitely and we have nothing on any other."

"Oh, yes, we have. On one other man."

MERCHANDISING SLOWS DOWN IN SEVENTH DIST.

Chicago Federal Bank Reports On Oct. Conditions

Chicago, Nov. 26—(AP)—Wholesale and retail merchandising trade slowed down in the Seventh Federal Reserve bank announced today.

The reversals followed unexpected increases during September and affected almost all lines with the exception of wholesale hardware and electrical supply trades.

As a result decreases against the first 10 months of last year were greater. Groceries were 21 per cent under 1931 totals; hardware 26 per cent; dry goods 32 per cent; drugs, 23 per cent; shoes 42 per cent, and electrical supplies 43 per cent, the report said.

An increase of only one per cent in department store business during October over the month before was caused by a 17 per cent seasonal decline in Detroit.

Chicago stores enjoyed a six per cent gain in sales; Indianapolis a two per cent gain and Milwaukee one of 18 per cent. Stores in the smaller cities reported business increases averaging eight per cent.

You will find almost an ideal study of Indian life in "Wah' kon-tah," by John Joseph Mathews.

This writer, himself a member of the Osage nation, a college graduate and a World War flyer, has presented a plain and unvarnished picture of tribal ways and habits of thought, and has clothed it in a remarkably fluid and poetic English style.

Mostly, "Wah' kon-tah" deals with Major Laban J. Miles, who was Indian agent on the Osage reservation for a good many years beginning in 1878. Major Miles liked the Osages and was liked by them, and did what he could to make easier their painful transition from nomadism to civilization.

Writing about his work, Mr. Mathews pays his tribute to the man himself and to the tribesmen among whom he worked.

Out of these pages there emerged a clear, unsentimental picture of a thoughtful, proud and mystic people who were fouly dealt with by their white conquerors. "Wah' kon-tah" will give you a new slant on a much misunderstood subject.

Published by the University of Oklahoma Press, the book is the November choice of the Book of the Month Club.
